The Fund gained 0.5% in April despite market weakness. This is attributable to our weighting towards resources companies that performed strongly on strong global economic data, and investors once again seeking a resources hedge against increasing inflation. Meanwhile, major banks the Fund is not invest in pulled back, and various industrial and technology stocks underperformed.

Equity markets pulled back in April after a strong rally since October, with the ASX 200 index declining 2.9% and the S&P 500 index 4.1%. Re-accelerating inflation data and a robust labour market in the US have caused expectations of rate cuts to be pushed out until the end of the year. Markets are now pricing only one Fed cut in 2024, after expecting six cuts at the end of last year. This has caused bond yields to move higher, combined with extended long positioning in equity markets. Likewise in Australia, a hot March CPI number has resulted in the market pricing out RBA cuts, with a small probability of a hike by year end. We began the year with the market expecting two RBA rate cuts.

Our key winners were South32 (+19.7%) on stronger aluminium prices, Newmont (+18.6%) on strong gold prices, and a broad bucket of copper miners which cumulatively represented 7.0% of the Fund over the month. In addition, there were solid contributions from Rio Tinto (+7.2%) and our key technology stock pick Life360 (+5.2%). Looking forward, market direction will be a battle between earnings growth and renewed monetary policy headwinds, combined with long investor positioning. Our outlook for Australian profits has improved, led by resources, but remains modest for industrials and banks. Hence our portfolio remains weighted to resources companies, although some positions have been trimmed after large gains in March. Copper is our preferred commodity on a medium-term view, given structural demand growth and constrained supply in the near term.

We expect monetary policy is likely to weigh on the performance of many industrial stocks over the next few months and likely bank shares also. Outside of resources we favour quality businesses such as Telstra, CSL, insurers and select growth stock picks.
