The Fund was down 2.5% for January, while the broader market index (95% S&P global infrastructure and 5% cash) was down 2.2%. Top portfolio performers were North American roads company Ferrovial (+7.2%), European renewables company Ørsted (+4.6%), and US rail company CSX (+3.0%).

The weakest portfolio performers were European energy and renewable company RWE (-17.1%), US industrial REIT Rexford (-6.3%), and Australian roads company Atlas Arteria (-6.2%). RWE was notably weak due to declining European energy prices, and its small unhedged exposure to merchant power prices as a power generator.

During the month we made several small changes to Fund positioning.

Global markets were broadly positive in January, but markets were volatile around the inflation / interest rate narrative, and the release of 2023 Q4 results. The US 10-year sovereign yield was flat for the month at 3.9%.

The S&P 500 total return index was up 1.7% for the month. The US utility index (UTY) was down 2.9% for the month.

We continue to see value in many areas of the global real assets sector, even allowing for higher interest rates, but we are currently holding cash at 10.4% to allow us to exploit opportunities should we see volatility throughout the year.
