The Fund returned 3.0% in June, as equity markets continued to march higher from April's tariff-related volatility. Fund performance was helped by its industrial, real estate, and healthcare holdings.

Positive contributors: industrial services provider API Group (+9.4%) continued its strong run after being included in the S&P Midcap 400 index. Corporate real estate services firm, Jones Lang Lasalle (+14.9%) climbed as US bond yields fell, increasing the market's confidence in a normalisation in its transaction-linked revenues which are currently in a cyclical downturn. Software company Oracle's (+32.1%) backlog continues to grow with remaining performance obligations (RPO), the key indicator of future revenue, hitting a record level in June driven primarily by its Cloud Infrastructure business. Amazon (+7.0%) also made attractive gains, on continued strength in Amazon Web Services (AWS), its cloud computing platform. Contract research organisation, IQVIA (+12.3%), rose on expectations for improved pharmaceutical research activity.

Detractors: Japanese factory automation company Keyence (-4.8%) declined as investors reassessed prospects for an imminent increase in factory automation investments. Keyence has invested in sales headcount which we expect to support attractive growth over the coming years, and we increased our position on share price weakness. French car manufacturer Renault (-13.8%) fell on news the CEO was leaving to take the helm at Kering; the Fund's position is under review.

Fund activity: The Fund initiated a position in the world's largest semiconductor foundry, TSMC. We consider the shares undervalued for the growth TSMC should deliver from its increasingly monopolistic position in the contract manufacturing of advanced semiconductors, required for high performance computing applications. A position was also taken in credit bureau, TransUnion where an eventual normalisation in US mortgage inquiries and a reacceleration in credit activity in India should support attractive earnings growth over the coming three years.

We continue to seek attractively valued, good quality companies with idiosyncratic drivers of investment returns.
