

Milford Global Opportunities Fund - R Class

March 2026

Portfolio Manager

Stephen Johnston
Portfolio Manager

The Fund fell 5.6% in March, as escalated geopolitical tensions became the dominant driver of markets.

Share markets globally experienced large declines over the month, as the conflict in the Middle East began and then escalated materially. Oil and gas prices surged to the highest levels since 2022, when Russia invaded Ukraine, resulting in investors re-evaluating the likely economic outcomes across regions. This was reflected in the relative performance of share markets, as European (-9.1%) and UK (-6.2%) share markets fell by more than US share markets (-5.0%), given Europe is a net importer of both oil and gas.

Top contributors to performance over the month were oil giant Shell (+16.6%) and payments platform Wise (+4.9%). Shell benefited from the material surge in oil prices, which improves the free cash flow the company can produce. Wise was a beneficiary of rotation among investors into companies relatively less impacted by the energy supply shock.

The outlook ahead remains extremely uncertain. There continues to be a number of ways the current conflict in the Middle East could go, and as such the Fund is retaining a larger than usual weighting to cash to provide flexibility. Many high-quality companies have de-rated materially, creating opportunities for long-term investors. The Fund continues to focus its investments on companies that are best rewarded for risk.
