May was a strong month for global equity markets, with the S&P500 continuing to lead the way, up another 5.3%. This strength was pulled higher by sentiment around AI and AI CapEx, factors with less available exposure in the Australian market. The Fund's benchmark lagged the broader recovery in markets, up a more modest 0.9%, and pleasingly the Fund (+1.8%) outperformed this by 0.9%.

Resources continued to be the bright spark on the local market, as a proxy for AI CapEx. Key outperformers within the fund include Canadian-based mining company Capstone Copper (+30.0%) - up on the back of strong demand, and copper supply disruptions benefitting the copper price. Lithium miner IGO (+28.9%) up strongly on the back of buoyant commodity prices and expectations of improved operating performance.

At a sector level, with concerns over the domestic consumer and credit growth building, post budget financials were led lower, including the four major banks. Meanwhile our healthcare holding, CSL (-22.3%), dragged on performance after a disappointing update saw it sell-off during the month. Brambles (-26.8%), another small holding, also disappointed the market during the period and thus underperformed the broader market. Both were modest holdings in the fund, and therefore the volatility was overall.

Positioning remains somewhat defensive as we continue to monitor the significant disruption being seen in physical oil flows. Oil shortages should ultimately drive inflation and slow growth. Given our concerns we remain modestly overweight in energy and refining. Domestically we have been cautious on the government budget outcomes but given weakness in markets we have begun to see opportunities in domestic cyclicals following the significant weakness seen in share prices. We will be continuing to look for good medium-term opportunities to deploy capital.
