July was a mixed month for global equity markets. The ASX 200 rose 2.3%, outperforming international markets as investors moved away from AI beneficiaries following a strong first half. The Fund returned 1.8%, outperforming the benchmark by 1.0% over the month.

In early July, stretched positioning and concerns around the pace of AI investment triggered a correction across several global technology beneficiaries. In Australia, this drove strong performance from financials which had been used as a funding short for markets more leveraged to the AI build out. The banks were significant beneficiaries, with CBA (+7.8%) and NAB (+9.2%) among the strongest performers. Financials were the largest positive contributor to the Fund over the month.

The other major contributor was the Fund's energy positions, which rebounded strongly as renewed disruption in the Strait of Hormuz drove a 20% rise in crude prices. This flowed through to oil and gas holdings Woodside (+16.8%) and Santos (+8.7%) as well as refiners like Ampol (+21.3%) as higher refiner margins supported earnings. We have reduced some of these holdings after their strong performance, while retaining a reasonable energy exposure. Global inventories of crude oil are continuing to decline and are approaching critical levels which increases the likelihood of a larger crude price increase but also increases the need for a resolution to be found.

Looking ahead we have a weakening Australian housing market, a possible end to the RBA rate hiking cycle (unless oil prices surge further), 10-year bond yields breaking out to the upside, and a continuing surge in capital expenditure related to AI. This creates both increased uncertainty and opportunities as we are compensated by cheaper valuations in some sectors of the Australian equity market.
